Peter's search for his sister's slayer began at once, but was interrupted in 1917 by his enlisting in the United States Army. He was in the service twenty-three months, the greater part of which time he was overseas, and he resumed the search immediately on his discharge at Camp Dix. Only last week he learned that George maintained a cigar and candy stand at 23 Hanson place, Brooklyn, and he followed him from there to the house in Washington street.

Mavrogean said that he had married since coming to the United States. He was charged with violation of the limigration laws and was turned over to the immigration authorities.

PRINCETON TO REVIVE CLUB.

PRINCETON April 1.—The Law Club of Princeton University, which was distributed by the war, may soon be reorganized. It was reported to-day. The purpose of the club is to provide the groundwork for the legal education of students who intend to take up the study of law after their graduation from Princeton. This is provided in addresses and lectures by the heads of law schools and prominent members of the Bar.

Despite the army, Eamon de Valera and his immediate followers seem to be showing an inclination found of the Allies.

and his immediate followers seem to be showing an inclination toward concord. The standing committee of the Sim. Fein communicated to the press to-day a resolution adopted unanimously and signed by De Valera, Charles Burgess and all members of the committee, urging non-interference with public speeches. This, apparently, is De Valera's answer to the insistence of the treaty supporters that in failing to denounce violent interruptions at treaty meetings he practically condoned them.
